ABSTRACT

From this research, political participation is also closely related to the fulfillment of political rights. Where there is freedom for every citizen to express opinions and gather together in a forum. Participation in elections in Indonesia and in Sumenep is always increasing, this increase is also caused by millennial voters who participate in voting in elections. A democratic process in which the people freely and secretly elect their representatives to lead the government. Elections are an important mechanism in a democratic system to elect leaders and regulate political power. The General Election Commission (KPU) is the institution responsible for holding elections in Indonesia.

The KPU's main task is to organize, implement and supervise elections in a fair and honest manner. The KPU is also responsible for ensuring active public participation in elections and maintaining the integrity of the election process. Millennial voters are also the younger generation who have an important role in the election process. Openness and tolerance Millennial voters tend to have a more open attitude towards differences and have high tolerance values. Millennial voters are a group of voters who have special characteristics and interests. It is important for candidates and political parties to understand and accommodate the values and aspirations of millennial voters in an effort to win their support in elections.
